With a novel regimen, a single oral dose of trimethoprim-sulfamethoxazole (TMP-SMX) is noninferior to azithromycin for the treatment of uncomplicated gonorrhea. This study compared this regimen with the standard of care. In an open-label, multicenter, randomized, noninferiority study, patients were randomized to receive 1 g TMP-SMX per dose orally for 3 doses (for women, 1 dose for treatment of cervicitis only) or 500 mg azithromycin orally for 3 doses. All treatments were self-administered. All patients had a negative urine gonorrhea test at enrollment. The primary end point was treatment failure (undetected gonorrhea after treatment) 7 days after treatment. A total of 449 women and 415 men received study drug, of whom 13 (2.5%) and 35 (8.6%), respectively, experienced treatment failure. The difference between treatment groups was -4.0% (95% confidence interval [CI], -6.9% to -1.2%), and the lower limit of the 95% CI was above the prespecified margin of inferiority (2.0%). A total of 416 women received follow-up genital and rectal swabs 1 week after treatment, of whom 1 woman (0.2%) in the TMP-SMX group and 4 (1.0%) in the azithromycin group were infected. No other signs or symptoms of reinfection were reported. One case of treatment failure was reported with TMP-
